SSP strikes Temenos deal to offer single interface across all devices ‘out of the box’

Sydney, 9 March 2015 – SSP has struck a deal with financial services software provider Temenos to package its insurer offering with a new, single user experience platform (UXP).

Using Temenos’ UXP – edgeConnect – insurers will be able to easily and swiftly rebrand SSP’s Select and Pure Insurance products to each of their distribution channels. This means that insurers are able to present a consistent brand and interface across mobile, tablet, desktop and even telesales contexts, without forcing insurers to invest in a custom solution for each device.

Paul Miller, SSP Australia General Manager, said Australian consumers were increasingly expecting their insurers to have a presence across multiple devices.

“Going forward, insurers need their products to work across all their channels straight out of the box and with this technology we are simplifying this process,” Mr Miller said.

“Whether it’s providing consistency between what salespeople and consumers see or tackling completely new channels, we are empowering our customers to apply our products to new contexts.”

Dharmesh Mistry, Product Director UXP at Temenos, said; “Insurers realise they need to provide a seamless and consistent experience across the multiple channels that customers now use for buying insurance products. It’s important for them to also be agile and quick in responding to new market opportunities and customer demands,”

Together with SSP, we will not only help insurers to operate successfully in this demanding and rapidly changing environment, but we will also allow them to differentiate what they offer and set themselves apart from the competition. The joint venture will provide them with a future-proof platform that will embrace new channels and devices as they continue to emerge in this digital era.”

The news follows successful trials and the product is expected to form a central part of SSP’s insurance offering for the next five years.

The deal has already seen an Australian insurer taking up the new offer, implementing the system to create consistency across all platforms.
